PRO TIP...

A few of my favourite putting drills to try and better your putting and become more consistent.

1. Putt through tees

Using a few tees — either by placing them outside the heel and toe of your putterhead, and then trying to putt, your ball through a set of tees — is a very common way pro golfer's practice. It's quick to set up, and it's a simple way to make sure your putter is moving on a good path, and your ball is starting on your intended line.

2. Putting around hole

This is probably THE most common drill I see PGA Tour players practicing. And the best part is that it's so simple. Pick one hole, stand anywhere from three to five feet away, and work your way around the hole like a clock.

3. Club Behind Hole

A simple but effective speed control putting drill

Lay the pin or a golf club on the ground 1-2 feet behind the hole. Stand back 10-20 feet from the hole.

Practice putting from various distances focusing on getting the ball as close to the hole as possible, but not touching the club or pin behind the hole.

This improves speed control, and is essential for lag putting and avoiding costly three-putts.

These few drills should help you save a few putts on average per round and as a result lower your score per round.
